

where I call out why?
But I know who I'm talking to, in Jesus, my loving heavenly Dad. I don't claim to know it all, I simply trust in the one I know; Jesus.

His birth, life, death and resurrection call me to trust him; to trust him with my life, with my decisions. And today I'm called to trust him with Jayne.

Trust that the promise he made at her baptism, he'll keep.
There, in Jesus, Jayne was claimed as one of Father's loved children, in whom he delights.

The devil might whisper doubts, and raise questions to confuse, to kill and destroy my trust in Jesus. But I don't trust this liar, I know who he is.

And thankfully in Jesus, we know who God is,
not some remote being, but our loving, heavenly Father, who we can trust with our lives, just like Jesus.

We can trust or heavenly Father,
trusting Jesus' promise, that Jayne has a place in Father's heart, and even death can't rob her of that. Jesus' life was spent preparing this place for Jayne to discover life in, a life rich and full in Father's loving presence.

In life I still have many questions, but one thing I know, I know God as my loving heavenly Father, I know this personally through Jesus, my brother, I know this for in the Spirit God has come and lives personally with me now. In Jesus, I know God personally, so I trust him, I trust him more than what I don't know.

Today Jesus invites you to trust him; to trust that he is the Lord of the living and the dead.

That he can do what he says. That he does hold you in his hands, hands of love, and care, and truth. Today Jesus invites you to trust Jayne in his hands, to trust his word more than your doubts.

I trust this person.

Romans 14:7-9
For none of us lives for ourselves alone, and none of us dies for ourselves alone. If we live, we live for the Lord; and if we die, we die for the Lord. So, whether we live or die, we belong to the Lord.
For this very reason, Christ died and returned to life so that he might be the Lord of both the dead and the living.

John: 14:1-6
"Do not let your hearts be troubled. You believe in God; believe also in me. My Father's house has many rooms; if that were not so, would I have told you that I am going there to prepare a place for you? And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come back and take you to be with me that you also may be where I am. You know the way to the place where I am going."
Thomas said to him,
"Lord, we don't know where you are going,

so how can we know the way?" Jesus answered, "I am the way and the truth and the life. No one comes to the Father except through me."

The reading we had today from Paul's letter to the community of believers in Rome is a reminder to me that Jesus is in control. Paul wrote; "Christ died and returned to life so that he might be the Lord of
living." (Rom. 14:9) I'm sure that includes Jayne as well as you and I. Jesus is lord of both the dead and the living. Death hasn't whisked Jayne away and now holds her in its grasp.

No, Jesus, still holds Jayne in his grasp. He is Lord of both the dead and the living. Which also means Jesus holds us, today, in his grasp. Jesus holds Jayne and he holds us in his hands. Jesus is inviting us to trust him with our lives. Jesus is inviting us to trust him with Jayne's life.

Isn't that the big question in life; who can you trust? Who do you trust?

That lies at the heart of the story of Adam and Eve and there encounter with the serpent.

God, the one who had created them; but more than that had placed them in paradise. This God, whom they knew, said not to eat of the tree of 'Good and Evil'.
He even warned them that if they ate it they would die.

I don't know if Adam and Eve really knew what this meant. They'd never experienced death; but they did know the one who warned them.

Then the serpent comes along, and suggests that God, their Father, doesn't know what he's talking about. He even suggests that their Dad is a kill-joy keeping the best for himself. And then he invites them to eat and enjoy.

Who would you trust?

Today we are in the same boat; who do we trust? Today we're faced with death; who am I going to trust?

Will I trust death? In many ways it makes a powerful claim, Jayne is dead, and both she and we are powerless to make a difference. If we could we would have by now, wouldn't we!

Or will I trust Jesus? He makes the claim to be 'Lord of the living and the dead'. In the Gospel of John Jesus also invites us to trust him. He talked about preparing a place for us. Not just any place but the image is that we have a room, our own place in 'Fathers' home. And Jesus promises to 'come back and take us there, so we may be where he is'.

Did you notice that Jesus uses the image of 'Father'? I'm not sure what that word brings to your mind, but for Jesus, it is the person he trusts with his life. For Jesus this is the person he has the most intimate relationship with. He and the Father are one. He and the Father exist in a relationship of total trust, of affection, totally committed to each other. To sum up their relationship in one word, it is a relationship of 'love'.

Who do you trust?

Jesus whole life is an act of trust in his Father. Jesus claims to do what he sees his Father doing, and to say what he hears his Father saying. Jesus in so many ways tries to describe for us this wonderful relationship of trust that he lives in with the Father.

At the end of Jesus' life he was faced with the trust question. He's hanging on the cross, the Roman governments chosen form of capital punishment, to totally humiliate and discredit a person.

They didn't only want to execute the person, they wanted the mere suggestion of the person's name to be repulsive. Who would ever trust a person so discredited, so shamed and rejected.

Jesus hangs on the cross; will he trust his Father or not?

Jesus hanging on the cross is goaded to come down off the cross, and then people say they will believe in him. Jesus hanging on the cross is even directly tempted to lose trust in his Father. So we hear him cry from the cross; 'My God, my God, why have you forsaken me'.

Has anyone here today ever felt like that? Felt like God had let them down, that God was remote, distant, not there when you needed him. Has anyone ever cried out to God? God, why? God, I don't understand! God, help!

I have. I've felt confused, frustrated, angry, hurt, lost. I've cried out why.

I'm sure at times Jayne did too. Why this disease? What did I do to deserve it? If you're god, take it away. God, it's all too much, help! I'm sure there were times where Jayne joined Jesus in his gut wrenching cry; 'My God, my God, why have you abandoned me.'

And then amazingly Jesus dies; actually what Jesus does is place his life into his Father's hands. Without all the questions being answered; he chooses to trust the one he knows.

Jesus cry of agony is real, but he doesn't trust the lies being whispered in his ear. I can hear the devil whispering in Jesus' ear; 'see you can't trust him, he's let you down'. Can you hear the devil whispering; 'take control, do it yourself, you can't trust him'. 'Jesus, take control and save yourself, jump off this cross and live.'

What would have happened to Jesus if he'd have taken his life into his own hands; if Jesus had taken control for himself? What would have happened if Jesus had jumped off the cross?

Death!

The death of his relationship of love and trust with his Father. It would have died, and Jesus would have been left with an eternity of regret, of feeling abandoned, of not being able to trust anyone.

Death is much more than not breathing. The ultimate death is being abandoned, left regretting, with no way to change, trapped, with no hope.

Jesus stays on the cross, and at this point he gives his life into his Father's hands. Here are his words; "Father, I entrust my spirit into your hands!" And with those words he breathed his last." (Luke 23:46)

Jesus places his life into his Father's hands, trusting that his Father will raise him to new life. Now that's a big call, isn't it!

Today that's what we are doing; placing Jayne into Jesus' hands, trusting that he will raise her to new life.

A new life with a glorified body, where she will be free to live out this wonderful relationship of love and trust Jesus has created with the Father. Living it out person to person, experiencing the love of the Father for herself, person to person.

Jesus claims to have the power and the authority to do it. He's the Lord of the living and the dead. His whole life is a call to trust him, to place our lives in his hands, just as he lived and died trusting his Father; who by the way, in Jesus is our Father, is Jayne's loving Dad.

I don't claim to have all the answers. I still have my times of despair
