

LIFE THROUGH THE LENS

Pinterest image

SAFELY WRAPPED IN LOVE

I can't remember the last time I slept under an "Eiderdown". Today it seems to be about "Bed Spreads", which to my mind, are primarily about covering a bed so it looks good.

Many eiderdowns I have encountered while being beautifully made; as a child, I remember there was something more than "warmth".

Snuggling down into a bed on a cold night, the eiderdown gently wrapped you in the love it carried in each stitch. It offered a feeling of contentment, and the darkness didn't seem so dark, but probably most importantly, you knew that if you pulled the eiderdown over your head, there was no way the horrible, scary things that live under the bed could "get you".

Over the years, the warmth, contentment and feeling of being wrapped in the soft and gentle love of an eiderdown have been replaced with a much greater love; the love of God.

How do I know of God's love? I have been told about it by others I trust who have experienced it. I have read about it in His Word, the Bible, and I have experienced the wonderful feeling of snuggling down into His warm, soft love. The love I know will be there through the night and each minute of each day. The love that assures me there is nothing to fear, neither life nor death, cruel words, "put down tweets", or nasty "messages".

How can you feel wrapped in God's love? Talk to Him about His love, ask Him to make it part of your life, and trust He will do it.

Have a great week, and God bless you,
Kevin.